Epilogue

1959

To you, William D. Carlson, the first dean of our new found University, we dedicate this 1959 Epilogue. Busy as you have been, you are still known by the students for your earnest and untiring support of student rights and activities of every nature. We appreciate the privilege of studying and living a short part of our lives under your guidance. We will all long remember you for your willingness to devote your time to hear our problems, your smiling face, and your hearty laugh.

We wish to add this to the long lists of honors that you have earned but in such a manner that this honor will be everlasting. In retrospect, students will look back upon their years at Nevada Southern with its new found traditions and legends with a sense of longing and loyalty. You, although you may not always realize it, have contributed greatly to this feeling. You represent the continuity of the generations of students that will pass through this University for years to come. For all that you have done — thank you.

William D. Carlson
Dean

1951 marked the date of birth of Nevada Southern. It was the realization of a vision long held by the people of southern Nevada. In the beginning there were only two instructors teaching classes in the evenings at the Las Vegas High School but the outlook for the future was great. In 1955, Estelle and Howard Wilbourn donated the land on which to build an institution of higher learning. In the spring of that year a major drive by the students and educators of southern Nevada was made in an attempt to raise money to help erect Nevada Southern's first building. This hope in the student's hearts became a reality on July 1, 1957, when the college moved into their first building. As the registration rose, the groundbreaking for Nevada Southern's second building took place May 11, 1958. In April of 1959 this second building was completed and Nevada Southern was growing.

AUTOGRAPHS

It is interesting to imagine how some future Epilogue editor will scan the worn pages of one of this year's copies in search of inspiration. In the weary quiet of early morning hours it may amuse him to see our antiquated faces and funny dress. Our future to him will be a complex panorama — dated, catalogued, and filed away to add a small part of the tradition to which he is accustomed and accepts without too much thought. It takes a moment of reflection to realize that what we have done — what we do — is a small bit of pioneering that will have effects on many whom we shall never know nor they us. We have so much to occupy us in our immediate experiences that we cannot imagine that the most important things in the world to us now will not remain. I sincerely hope that all of you, my friends and classmates, will contemplate this record of our passing year with a broad perspective such as our future editor might do and benefit from a new and stimulating sense of history and accomplishment reflected in the pages.

Bob

Alma Mater

When sundown tints the hills with purple hue—
When dusk falls softly on the valley floor,
And Sunrise Mountain's ridges loom no more,
Our hearts, Nevada Southern, turn to you!
Among the sand dunes and the desert flowers
We walk again. In mem'ry we renew
The campus loves, the happy times we knew.
Our thanks, Nevada Southern, for those hours!
In after years, when other mem'ries pale,
Our thoughts will often journey back to you.
Our hearts will lift, our voices anew:
"All Hail, Nevada Southern, Hail! Hail! Hail!"
